

THE REAL ISSUE ABOUT NUCLEAR WASTE

The real issue is why we continue to generate nuclear waste.

We must not waste our energies arguing about whose unacceptable backyard should be chosen. West Valley isn't a solution and neither is Idaho, Nevada or any other place. It isn't a question of which is the least bad. They are all bad.

Transporting waste is, at best, a risky and expensive thing to do. All the time we're trying to move the nuclear waste problem, nuclear reactors in this country continue to produce more waste none of us wants.

We must stand together firmly to oppose the generation of more nuclear waste.

When the day comes when it is no longer acceptable to generate nuclear waste, then we will sit down together and decide what to do with the existing waste.
